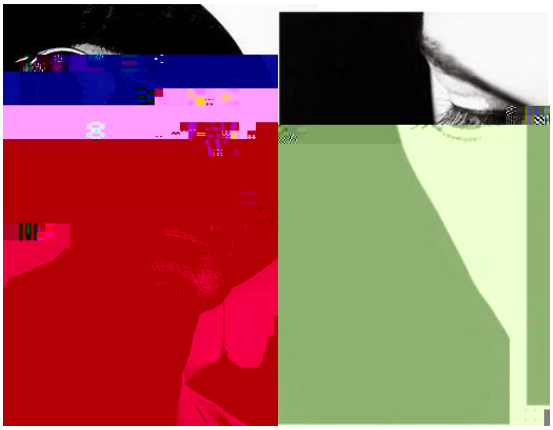
“I walk the line” Johnny Cash

At it's inception Colour Photography was considered vulgar and not worthy of artistic merit compared to the art of Black and White. However, the ground-breaking work of a range of photographers has changed that perception.


“Black and white are the colours of photography. To me they symbolize the alternatives of hope and despair to which mankind is forever subjected.”
Robert Frank